Located in the heart of Westminster, this 1927 building, originally a pub, and latterly used as offices has been carefully transformed into a highly bespoke new home. Open plan living quarters are clustered around a roof terrace, with views of the London Eye and Big Ben.

The building section has allowed for dramatic double height living spaces, hidden staircases and a lift, taking occupants from basement to the open air dining room on the 4th floor. The configuration of the house reflects the urban setting in which it is located, with all major living spaces located at the top of the building, in order to maximise daylight and views and to minimise disturbance from the street.

The existing mansard storey is replaced with two new floors to create a six-storey family home with exceptional clarity of plan, proportions of spaces and attention to detail.
